Q: how can i convert all the data in the dataframe, to date.time format using the hiveContext in spark I have a dataframe that contains the information of a user's location on the map. I want to convert all the column in the dataframe to date.time format and save it into another dataframe in hive table. How can i achieve this? I have tried `df.registerTempTable("test")` `val result = sqlContext.sql("select dt,ID,AREA,YELLOW,ORANGE,BLUE from test").select('dt,CAST(ID AS string) as ID,CAST(AREA AS string) as AREA,CAST(YELLOW as string) as YELLOW,CAST(ORANGE as string) as ORANGE,CAST(BLUE as string) as BLUE` how can i convert it all in date.time format or do we have to convert it like this? I have tried this but it did not work `import java.text.SimpleDateFormat import java.util.Date df.registerTempTable("test")` `val result = sqlContext.sql("select dt,ID,AREA,YELLOW,ORANGE,BLUE from test").select('dt,CAST(ID AS string) as ID,CAST(AREA AS string) as AREA,CAST(YELLOW as string) as YELLOW,CAST(ORANGE as string) as ORANGE,CAST(BLUE as string) as BLUE, (CAST(col("dt") as String) + " " + col("ID") + " " + col("AREA") + " " + col("YELLOW") + " " + col("ORANGE") + " " + col("BLUE") + " " + col("CAST(B`

- June 15th, 2015 Writer's Note: This is day 7 of a 7 day series/journaling event. Please participate in the comments if you are so inclined. Thanks, B. I don't know how we ended up in this situation. But, given the human condition, there will always be those times which defy even the most sophisticated society tools to prevent or stop human madness. And the corollary to that madness is the dearth of options as to how to cope with a matter that has enraged the human mind and spirit. In this case, one needs only look across the bay at where the span of the Golden Gate Bridge begins to see the appropriate metaphor. A fully functional bridge spans the entrance to San Francisco. It has cars and bicyclists traversing it normally. Presumably, most people feel a little safer, knowing a cross-frame has been installed to allow for the delivery of extrication equipment should such a need arise. All these people are flourishing and are happy people, unharmed and intact. It is only when one sees the span cross-frame being lifted and moved carefully into position to raise the span itself that one sees the whole import of the situation. The bridge will be open to traffic until crews can clean the debris which was deposited into the other side of the bridge during the earthquake. When they do, there will certainly be a wave of difficulties likely to come with traffic through the bridge. That may be months. Yes, months. In the meantime, we have already seen a particularly dangerous situation at the bridge: the setting up of a temporary permit to allow pedestrians, and particularly bicyclists, to move from one side of the bridge to the other. I leave to your imagination the difficulties you may encounter getting across, if you so choose, as there is now a second set of regulations in place to control movement on the bridge. Countries around the world are prone to having their own sets of restrictions for movement, having those same restrictions supplemented by additional restrictions or new ones imposed, to control the flow of traffic and, in many cases to control the population. Other countries will generally suspend school, work, and public transport options to deal with the effects of the disruption. Should the problems last, they will need to figure out what the next steps will be in order to reduce
