combination of an immunologic T-cell test and an analysis of prealbumin levels as an early marker of chronic liver disease in patients with acalculous cholecystitis. To show the T-cell activation (TPA) test and prealbumin level in the prediction of chronic liver disease (CLD) in patients with acalculous cholecystitis.

Retrospective analysis of clinical data was carried out in 90 patients who were admitted to our hospital with acalculous cholecystitis. The 30 patients with CLD were compared with the 60 patients without CLD. The two groups were analyzed with respect to age, sex, past history of infections, duration of illness, and the following laboratory data, including prealbumin, tumor necrosis factor- $\alpha$ , interleukin-8, TPA. Prealbumin levels were compared using a 2-tailed t test. The positive and negative predictive values (PPV and NPV) were also evaluated.

The predictive values were expressed as 95% confidence intervals. The duration of acute illness and age distribution were similar in the two groups. The mean prealbumin level was  $26.15 \pm 9.66$  and  $23.85 \pm 8.89$ mg/dL in the CLD and non-CLD groups, respectively. There was no statistically significant difference in the mean prealbumin levels between the two groups ( $p=0.486$ ). The mean TPA was 1284 and 956 IU in the CLD and non-CLD groups, respectively ( $p=0.014$ ). The highest PPV and NPV values were observed at a TPA of 1660 IU, which yielded a sensitivity of 89.7%, specificity of 67.7%, PPV of 91.9%, and NPV of 66.7%. The TPA test and 0cc13bf012

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a fastener assembly used with a marine vessel. In particular, the present invention relates to a fastener assembly used with a marine vessel, for attaching a door to a deck of the marine vessel. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, there have been numerous disclosures of fasteners, such as screws, bolts, etc., used with a marine vessel. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 5,669,047 discloses a method for attaching a hull of a vessel to a frame of the vessel. A fastener member is threaded through a hole in a first part, and into the frame, so as to attach the first part to the
